CHEESE FONDUE

Cheese fondue is a comforting meal and one of Switzerland's national dishes. France (Savoyarde fondue) and Italy (Italian fondue) also offer their own versions.

There are several types of cheese fondues, each a result of different combinations of cheeses. Here are some examples:

- Vaudoise fondue: made entirely with Gruyere cheese
- Fribourgeoise fondue: made entirely with Vacherin cheese
- Half & Half fondue: equal parts of Vacherin and Gruyere
- Neuchâteloise fondue: equal parts of Emmenthal and Gruyere
- Suisse-Central fondue: 1/3 Gruyere, 1/3 Emmenthal, 1/3 Sbrinz

It is recommended to blend two different types of cheeses (Emmenthal and Gruyere) when making a cheese fondue. But you can replace one cheese with another one of the same family of cheeses, or add one of your favourites.

Side Dishes:

The classical way of serving cheese fondue is, of course, with a great crusty baguette cut in cubes that you can then dip in the warm cheese sauce. However, the bread must not be too fresh otherwise it will break apart in the pot.

Cheese fondue can also be great with vegetables (potatoes, mushrooms, broccoli, cauliflower), fruits (apples, grapes), cold cuts (ham, sausages) and a green salad.

Beverages:

A white wine suits particularly well a meal of cheese fondue. A lively, light and fruity white wine would be the perfect match.

On the other hand, it is highly recommended to serve hot beverages to your guests, like green or black tea, during the meal. This will prevent the cheese to harden in your stomach and ease digestion. Cold drinks served with cheese fondue could potentially ruin your evening.

Dessert:

After such a rich meal, a fruit salad would be an ideal dessert.

CHEESE FONDUE RECIPE

SERVINGS: SIX

PREPARATION TIME: 20 MINUTES

APPROXIMATELY 200 G OF CHEESE PER GUEST

Ingredients:

- 1 ½ lb (700 g) of Gruyere cheese
  - ⅔ lb (300 g) of Emmenthal cheese
  - 1 ¼ cups (300 ml) white wine
  - 3 tbsp (45 ml) flour
  - 1 tbsp (15 ml) Kirsch (optional)
  - 1 garlic clove
  - Ground pepper
  - Nutmeg to taste

Preparation:

- It is easier to melt the cheese if the cheese is grated. Don't forget to remove the crust of the cheese.
- Cut bread into bite-size cubes.
- Use a medium saucepan to prepare the cheese preparation.
- Rub the interior of the saucepan with the garlic clove cut in half.
- In a plastic bag, mix cheese and flour together.
- Heat the wine in a saucepan on the stove at medium/high heat.
- Just before the wine boils, add the cheese, pepper and nutmeg.
- Stir constantly by doing "8" movements with your spoon over medium heat. The melted cheese should have a smooth consistency after approximately ten minutes.
- Add in the Kirsch (optional)
- Fill the fondue pot with water up to the max level indicator, heat on the stove until boiling and then place in fondue rack. Make sure the water does not evaporate completely.
- Transfer the melted cheese into the ceramic fondue pot over the sink, using oven gloves to protect yourself against burns.
- Place ceramic fondue pot inside the stainless steel pot in the rack, already in place on the table. When serving cheese fondue, do not install the fork guide.
- Everyone can now enjoy a piece of crusty bread or anything else dipped in cheese. It is important to stir the cheese often so that it remains smooth throughout the meal.

CHEESE PROBLEM?

Your fondue is too thick? Slightly increase the intensity of the burner's flame and add a small quantity of white wine. Stir constantly.

Your fondue is too liquid? Slightly increase the intensity of the burner's flame and add a few pieces of cheese. Stir constantly.

Use a wooden, nylon or silicone spoon. It is not recommended to use stainless steel utensils.

Suggestion: Kirsch Please?

Kirsch is a clear, colourless liqueur traditionally made from the distillation of cherries (pulp, pits, stems). Added to your cheese fondue preparation, Kirsch liqueur will give it a complex and fruity flavour. Instead of Kirsch, you may use instead Poire William or white vermouth.

Bon appetit!
